Truly shared it with him for a long time, since she could see her son only by lying to her husband, BUT OF COURSE he went down to Havnor South Port, in one of his father's carts driven by one of his father's carters, along with Master Hemlock. As a rule, people do what wizards advise them to do. And it is no small honor to be invited by a wizard to be his student or apprentice. Hemlock, who had won his staff on Roke, was used to having boys come to him begging to be tested and, if they had the gift for it, taught. He was a little curious about this boy whose cheerful good manners hid some reluctance or self-doubt. It was the father's idea, not the boy's, that he was gifted. That was unusual, though perhaps not so unusual among the wealthy as among common folk. At any rate he came with a very good prenticing fee paid beforehand in gold and ivory. If he had the makings of a wizard Hemlock would train him, and if he had, as Hemlock suspected, a mere childish flair, then he'd be sent home with what remained of his fee. Hemlock was an honest, upright, humorless, scholarly wizard with little interest in feelings or ideas. His gift was for names. "The art begins and ends in naming," he said, which indeed is true, although there may be a good deal between the beginning and the end...and charms to ensure the good outcome of such undertakings was shared among the witches. But when there are different kinds of knowledge, after all...Nothing happened, and he had time to regret the sunlight and the seawind, and to doubt the spell, and to doubt himself, before the earth rose up around him, dry, warm, and dark...That gave her pause. She stood silent. "It's the name the witch Rose of my village on Way gave me, in the spring under Iria Hill," she said at last, standing up and speaking truth... "Tell me what you'll be doing..." She was getting used to his strange face now and was able to read it. She thought that he looked sad. His way of speaking was harsh, quick, dry, peaceable. The men of the Isle are not always wise, eh?" he said. "Maybe the Doorkeeper." He looked at her now, not glancing but squarely, his eyes catching and holding hers. "But there. In the wood. Under the trees. There is the old wisdom. Never old. I can't teach you. I can take you into the Grove." After a minute he stood up. "Yes?"...among us, Medra. They must be settled, and they can't be settled easily. Though a little goodwill...She looked at him without regret, or reproach, or shame... "What brought you here, Azver?" the Namer asked. "I've often thought of asking you. A long, long time. Later when he tried to repeat the word, he stood dumb...hands...crowned king. There is real work to do," the Summoner said, and his voice too was like stone, cold, pursuing him across the winter sea, "riding the west wind, the rain wind, the heavy cloud." Each cavern stretched away. He could see that its rooms and passages went much farther than he had. "Nowhere," said the Doorkeeper. "I let her out as I let her in, at her desire..." But when the lore-books of a wizard came into a warlord's hands he was likely to treat them with...The man named Ged went to him and took his hands, which were half stretched out, pleading... "You never sent to me, you never let me send to you, all the time you were gone. I was just...The Master of Iria of Westpool, Birch, didn't own the old house, but he did own the central and richest lands of the old domain. His father, more interested in vines and orchards than in quarrels with his relatives, had left Birch a thriving property. Birch hired men to manage the farms and wineries and cooperage and cartage and all, while he enjoyed his wealth. He married the timid daughter of the younger brother of the Lord of Wayfirth, and took infinite pleasure in thinking that his daughters were of noble blood... "I wanted to ask you to go away with me," he said...sorcery was not much greater than his pupil's, but he had clear in his mind the idea of something...only weak men said a thing and then unsaid it...grew darker. The girl then folded it -- it was not a plate at all -- into the shape of a pancake and
